The Commission on the Public's Health System is a community-based, city-wide membership health advocacy organization fighting to ensure that all New York residents—particularly in low-income, medically underserved, immigrant and communities of color—have equal access to quality health care services regardless of race, ethnicity, language spoken, diagnosis, or ability to pay. CPHS is committed to making sure that our public health system stays strong, and that the public's voice on health care issues is heard.
